The author, whose copyright is declared on the title page of this work, has granted to Simon Fraser University the non-exclusive, royalty-free right to include a digital copy of this thesis, project or extended essay[s] and associated supplemental files ("Work") (title[s] below) in Summit, the Institutional Research Repository at SFU. SFU may also make copies of the Work for purposes of a scholarly or research nature; for users of the SFU Library; or in response to a request from another library, or educational institution, on SFU's own behalf or for one of its users. Distribution may be in any form.

The author has further agreed that SFU may keep more than one copy of the Work for purposes of back-up and security; and that SFU may, without changing the content, translate, if technically possible, the Work to any medium or format for the purpose of preserving the Work and facilitating the exercise of SFU's rights under this licence.

It is understood that copying, publication, or public performance of the Work for commercial purposes shall not be allowed without the author's written permission.

While granting the above uses to SFU, the author retains copyright ownership and moral rights in the Work, and may deal with the copyright in the Work in any way consistent with the terms of this licence, including the right to change the Work for subsequent purposes, including editing and publishing the Work in whole or in part, and licensing the content to other parties as the author may desire.

The author represents and warrants that he/she has the right to grant the rights contained in this licence and that the Work does not, to the best of the author's knowledge, infringe upon anyone's copyright. The author has obtained written copyright permission, where required, for the use of any third-party copyrighted material contained in the Work. The author represents and warrants that the Work is his/her own original work and that he/she has not previously assigned or relinquished the rights conferred in this licence.

ABSTRACT

You're a graduate student preparing to write your thesis or dissertation. You'd like to start writing up your amazing research results, but first there's the small matter of your university's style requirements.

This document provides a template to help you write up your research into a thesis or dissertation. The most important part is the `sfuthesis` class, which does much of the work necessary to make your thesis conform to SFU's formatting requirements (as of 2014). The class (and this template) have been designed to be easy to use and easy to maintain, so you don't have to be a  $\text{\LaTeX}$  genius to make those small changes your supervisor asks for.

DEDICATION

*This thesis is dedicated to you,
as you are dedicated to your thesis.*

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I would like to thank:

Donald Knuth, Leslie Lamport, and everybody else involved in the development of  $\text{T}_{\text{E}}\text{X}$  and  $\text{L}_{\text{A}}\text{T}_{\text{E}}\text{X}$ . Without them, our documents would all look a lot less pretty.

the members of Bread Club, for always being there with a baguette and some crumby puns.

my parents, for supporting me through thick and thin.

my supervisors, Dr. Cuthbert Calculus and Dr. Emmett Brown, for their encouragement, patience, and advice.

the Evil League of Evil, for funding me and my graduate research with a Victor Frankenstein Graduate Scholarship.
